Since 1989, Dragon Ball Z has been capturing hearts and keeping millions entertained. Which of the adventurous, daring, and endearing character could be your twin? Your enemy and his gang have cornered you in the street. What do you do? Know you can beat them, but still try to prevent the fight. Mentally prepare yourself to kick some butt. What is tethering? Besides the grounds for a giant debate about ethics (the kind that you can only find on the Internet) tethering, in this case, means to share the Internet connection from your phone with other devices. There are several ways to accomplish this -- connecting your phone to your computer via USB, setting up your phone as a wireless hotspot and router, and sharing a data stream over Bluetooth. All these connection types are built into Android, with native Bluetooth tethering new in Ice Cream Sandwich. Of course, different manufacturers can, and have, modified things so that these options are excluded -- at the behest of the carrier, of course. We'll talk more about why in a few minutes. Tethering itself is pretty easily done. USB tethering involves installing device drivers (Windows only) and plugging in your phone to a high-speed USB port on your computer, then using your computer's built-in connection manager to use the phone or tablet as a USB modem. Bluetooth tethering will need the phone paired with the computer, and the connection type set up correctly in your computer's Bluetooth settings. Wifi is the easiest way -- you just turn it on and connect as you would any other wireless hotspot. Except that many carriers, especially in the United States, have blocked tethering this way. You see, your carrier wants to charge you a premium to use your data plan from any device besides your phone. Nobody likes it, but it's in the terms you agreed to when you signed up. They have all sorts of ways to block tethering on their end, and they are pretty diligent about it. Android hackers and developers also have found ways to work around these blocks, and it's a big cat and mouse game. An inside source with one of the biggest cellular carriers in the world has specifically told me that if your usage pattern draws suspicion, there is no current method that can't be detected by your carrier, including the newer VPN methods. If you do it a lot, without paying the extra fees associated with it, you'll get caught. We're not going to judge anyone, and a few of us here at Android Central think charging extra for tethering is silly -- especially with data caps. Just know what may happen before you start so you don't get caught unaware. Taking a video of your screen is a bit harder. Here's how to record your phone's screen, when you need to show someone what's happening on your phone. Recording your phone's screen can come in handy when you want to make a video of a game you're playing, show someone how to perform a task on their phone, or document something weird your phone is doing. As of Lollipop, recording your screen on Android got a lot easier. To get started, you'll need a screen recorder app. There's no shortage of apps for recording your screen on Android, but so far the best one I've found is A-Z Screen Recorder. It doesn't require root, has no limit on recording length, doesn't add watermarks, and it's ad-free. Not a bad deal. Once you've downloaded it, follow these steps: Launch the A-Z Screen Recorder app from your app drawer. You'll see an overlay with four buttons appear. Tap the gear icon to tweak video recording settings including recording resolution, frame rate, and bit rate. When you're done, press Back to return to the home screen. Open the app you or navigate to the screen you want to record. Tap the camera shutter icon in the A-Z overlay. The video will begin recording. Use your phone like normal until you're ready to stop recording. When you're finished, pull down the notification shade. In the A-Z notification you can either pause or stop recording. Once you're finished, you should end up with a video like this one: Obviously, we can't record the screen before we start recording (insert your own Inception bwam), but you can see in the video above how ending the recording works. Once you're done, tap the image icon in the overlay to view your recordings. You can also tap the magic wand icon on one of your videos to make edits, including the following: Trim or cut the video: You can clip off the beginning or end of the video, or cut out sections in the middle. These features require the Pro version which costs $3. Crop video: If you want to focus on a smaller portion of the video, you can use an external plugin to crop the frame down. Convert to GIF: Another Pro feature, you can convert your video to a GIF format directly within the app. Replace audio: You can add your own soundtrack on top of the video, in place of the audio from your phone itself. Of course, while it's nice to have the Pro features, none of them are strictly necessary. You can edit videos and create GIFs in plenty of other apps. Still, a $3 donation is a small price to pay for the convenience. Dragon Ball Z: Buu's Fury is the third game in the Legend of Goku trilogy for the Game Boy Advance. In addition to dozens of collectibles, DBZ: Buu's Fury has cheats and glitches that make it easier to earn the title of Eternal Dragon. When you perform the Fusion Dance with Goku/Vegeta or Goten/Trunks, ignore the button prompts and enter the following to always get a perfect fusion: Up, B, Left, Down, A. Toei Animation / Nintendo There's a glitch you can exploit to temporarily duplicate equipment: Equip Goku and Goten or Vegeta and Trunks with the items you wish to duplicate. Perform the Fusion Dance to create Gogeta or Gotenks. Remove the equipment from Gogeta/Gotenks and give it to another character. Gogeta/Gotenks will keep the equipment, so you'll have two sets until the fusion timer runs out. There's a glitch that gives you 255 Senzu Beans. When Gohan asks Goku to bring him a Senzu Bean during the World Tournament Saga: Fly to Korin's Tower. Retrieve the bean from Yajirobe, then eat it. Go back and talk to Gohan. Check your inventory to find a stash of 255 Senzu beans. There's a store on the Kai's planet that sells powerful armor and items to help you level up. To find it, visit the Kai's planet after defeating Buu, then go to the right-most map and breakthrough a crack in the wall. These unlockables will appear at the Hercule Cafe in Hercule City after you collect them. Mr. Popo's Turban Find the invisible chest between the four trees near Kami's Lookout. Ox King's Helmet Talk to Ox King in Goku's house after beating the game. The Bansho Fan Break the rocks behind the level 140 Gohan door in the forest by Goku's house. Yajirobe's Sword Walk around Yajirobe counter-clockwise three times, then go to the Southwest forest. Yamcha's Bat Destroy the boulder south of the Save Circle in Diablo Desert. If one of your weaker characters needs some extra experience, lure an enemy near a save point as a stronger character. Stand on the save point and defeat the enemy, then immediately switch to the weaker character so they earn the experience points. Equipping weights on your hands and feet will grant you extra experience from battle at the expense of your speed. Once you get to the end of the game, the best spot for leveling is the airship after you beat Majin Buu. Here, you can encounter the Shadow Colossus, which drops a large amount of experience points. Purchase the Kilton Armbrands and Kilton Boots from the shop on Planet Kai to maximize your gains. You can also fight the Shadow Colossus in the Barren Wastelands after beating Kid Buu. To unlock Gogeta as a playable character, collect every Z-Fighter Exhibit and Hercule Exhibit. There is a glitch that allows you to fly around as Super Saiyan on the world map: Enter Kami's tower and go down the staircase to the right. Go through the center door to get to the room where Goten and Trunks wake up after you fuse Gotenks for the first time. Transform into Super Saiyan, then approach the window and press A. You will remain Super Saiyan indefinitely. This trick can cause other game-breaking glitches, so save your progress before attempting. Wear a bandana to enter the Thieves' Den. You can get one by fighting enemies on the airship. When you beat Buu in Chapter 11, a portal will open in Kami's Lookout that will let you go back to previous areas. After beating the game, go to Southwest Forest and take the path that leads to the level 120 Vegeta Door. The Majin Fighters that come out of the door will randomly drop the Z Suit, so fight them until you get it. Continue down the path to find the Armor Of Darkness in a chest. After the end credits, you'll receive a rank based on your character's levels. Get every character to level 200 to earn the highest rank, Eternal Dragon.
